diverted more than $800,000 in legal fees from clients to a bank account unrelated to his law firm.

Edward Ambrosino was a lawyer specializing in economic and industrial development and financings. He also served as a councilman for the Town of Hempstead from March 2003 until he resigned in April.

Ambrosino evaded the assessment of income tax by claiming false and fraudulent business expense deductions and failing to report funds he diverted from the law firm. Specifically, Ambrosino claimed as a business expense rent for a Manhattan apartment that he paid for on behalf of a third party.

From 2013 through 2015, Ambrosino claimed more than $11 million in false deductions, resulting in significant underreporting of business income and taxes due to the IRS. If convicted, Bradford faces up to five years in prison for the conspiracy charge and up to three years in prison for each of 29 counts of aiding and assisting the filing of a false tax return. ■

MONTANA BUSINESS- MAN GUILTY IN EMPLOY- MENT TAX CASE

A Montana businessman pleaded guilty to employment tax fraud.

Trennis Baer owned and operated Baer Construction in Great Falls, Montana. Beginning in 2010 and continuing through 2018, Baer did not file quarterly employment tax returns and did not pay employment taxes withheld from his employees' wages to the IRS.

In addition to not complying with his employment tax obligations, Baer willfully did not file personal income tax returns for the years 2001 to 2006, 2008, and 2010 to 2018. The total tax loss to the IRS from Baer's conduct is more than $1.5 million.

Baer faces up to five years in prison. ■

OWNER OF WATERSLIDE GUILTY IN TAX CASE

The waterslide owner provided his real financial information to an undercover federal agent.

The owner of a Missouri waterslide attraction pleaded guilty to making a false tax return.

Jerry Don Beebe, 67, owned and operated Beebe's Roaring River Waterslide in Cassville, Missouri. Beebe admitted that he filed false federal income tax returns for tax years 2015 to 2018 because he did not want to pay additional taxes.

According to his plea, Beebe was interested in selling his business and met with an undercover federal agent, who was posing as a potential buyer. During the meetings, Beebe showed the undercover agent records documenting his company's true gross receipts, which differed from what Beebe reported on his federal tax returns. Beebe's records showed gross receipts of $135,282 for 2017 (when Beebe only reported $24,535 on his tax return) and gross receipts of $145,451 for 2018 (when Beebe only reported $29,172 on his tax return).

Beebe admitted that he routinely destroyed his business records. Beebe told the undercover agent that he was in "the mode of secrecy." When showing the undercover agent his 2017 and 2018 records, Beebe said he was "gun shy" and wouldn't have these records much longer. Beebe also dealt in large amounts of cash and told the undercover agent that he paid everything in cash that he could.

According to the terms of his plea, Beebe must pay $70,824 in restitution to the federal government in unpaid federal taxes from 2015 to 2018, $6,626 in unpaid Missouri income taxes from 2015 to 2018, and $13,232 in unpaid Missouri sales taxes from 2015 to 2018. ■

SOUVENIR SHOP OWNER CHARGED

He allegedly did not report more than $1 million.

The owner of souvenir and T-shirt stores in Minnesota was charged with tax evasion, failure to file a tax return, and failure to account for and pay employment tax.

According to court records, Shimon Shaked, 56, did not report the revenue and income he earned from his stores on his tax returns from 2013 through 2015. Instead, he reported the revenue and income on his daughter's income tax returns. Shaked further evaded the assessment of taxes on the income he earned through the stores by failing to report the full revenue and income to the IRS.

Shaked used the company's bank account to pay for personal expenses, including child support, an apartment in Duluth, and costs associated with attempting to open an alligator farm.

Shaked, who did not file a 2018 tax return, recently opened two new stores in Michigan. In all, Shaked failed to report more than $4 million in income from 2013 through 2018. He evaded and avoided paying more than $800,000 in federal income taxes.

IOWA BOOKIE GETS PROBATION FOR FALSE RETURNS

An Iowa bookie was sentenced to three years of probation for filing a false tax return.

Merksick operated an online bookkeeping operation for gambling. He set up a company, TJM Enterprises, for that purposes.

Tony Merksick, 43, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, was also ordered to pay $100,285 in restitution to the IRS.

An IRS investigation revealed Merksick underreported his company's income by more than $100,000.
